Arkane

Pierre Bordage

Arkane is a labyrinth city governed by seven founding houses with corrupt power concentrated in the Heights, the luxurious upper levels. Court intrigues, poisonings, murders and black magic all take place there. Meanwhile the condemned and outcast are in the Dumps neighborhood.

When some of the houses form an alliance to eliminate the Drac house, this upsets the balance in Arkane, and Oziel, the last representative of its clan, flees the city's Heights. She tries to reach the Dumps to join her brother and raise an army among the prisoners in the terrible penal colony in the depths of the city.

Along the way she will meet Renn, an apprentice rock wizard, and Oriq, a warrior from a faraway land, who have come to Arkane to warn the city leaders of an invasion by a horde of frightening creatures from the north...

Pierre Bordage is the author of over forty novels. Renowned and translated throughout the world, he is best known for his series Les Guerriers du Silence (The Warriors of Silence).

The end of the war between magicians could come from a slave girl discovering her powers

The Illusions of Sav-Loar

(Les Illusions de Sav-Loar)

Manon Fargetton

- An inspiring female-driven story
- Captivating, fluid writing that draws the reader into an ambitious tapestry
- An independent narrative in the same realm as The Legacy of the Crosser-Kings, Prix Imaginales award for best French novel 2016

In the kingdom of Shadow, the women who possess the gift are persecuted by men from the Closed, the patriarchal religious order. For centuries now these women have taken refuge in the legendary Sav-Loar, a city at the heart of the Forest of Dreams protected by spells and illusions.

When Blue becomes a teenager, she discovers her powers and joins forces with a group of slaves pursued by the Closed. Heading to the city of banished female magicians, she will cross paths with Fèl, a manipulative beauty enamored with freedom, and Til'Enarion, a formidable member of the Closed who hunts down young female magicians.

The war between magicians reaches its peak, and the reckoning has come for the established order.

The Legacy of the Crosser-Kings

(L'Héritage des Rois-Passeurs)

Manon Fargetton

- Two portraits of strong, charismatic women, far from the usual tropes of the fantasy genre where male heroes still reign
- A richly constructed and original imaginary world, endowed with a convincing history and a fully coherent chronology
- A fluid, pleasant prose style, easily read by all ages

Shadow, a medieval universe full of magic, and Shore, the present-day world as we know it, are two distorted reflections of a single reality. Only a few individuals, the Crossers, are capable of passing from one world to the other.

Énora is one of them. On the day of her twentieth birthday, celebration turns into massacre as strangers appear and slaughter all the young men present, including Énora's twin brother. Taking flight, she seeks refuge in the realm of Shadow, the land of her ancestors.

There, the rebel princess Ravenn is coming home after years of exile, returning to seize the throne that is hers by right. But she is not welcome...

Here is the story of two intertwined worlds, and two strong-willed women. Of two simultaneous returns that will once more play havoc with the tortuous destiny of Shadow.

Coincidence? Or a meeting long since ordained?

the cruel destiny of
Rekk the Butcher

The Emperor's Hand

(La Main de l'Empereur)

Olivier Gay

Rekk's childhood was not easy, and the rest of his life won't be, either. Gladiator then soldier in the imperial army, he is spotted by the Emperor in the infernal mire of the Kushite jungles. He becomes the Emperor's agent to defeat the hordes of barbarians, then the armed wing for all the Empire's dirty work.

Little by little, Rekk evolves into a hated and feared man whose notoriety grows. His destiny turns him into a formidable warrior and puts him in moral dilemmas.

But what happens when our own legend escapes us? If Rekk has always benefitted from his talent to survive, those around him can scarcely say as much...

Olivier Gay, born in Grenoble in 1979, is a French writer of crime, fantasy and horror novels, for both adults and young adults, and a fervent admirer of David Gemmell and George R.R. Martin.

- Engaging heroes embarked on a rite of passage journey
- A tribute to traditional fantasy in the wake of David Gemmell

A figure straight out of a scary bedtime story, the Butcher is not only a merciless warrior. He was also a father...

The Ice Swords

(Les Épées de Glace)

Olivier Gay

Déria is the daughter of a northern lord, sent to finish her education at the court of the Emperor where her charm, just as devastating as her sword, leaves no one indifferent. But Déria prefers the company of her young maid Shani and the soldier Mahlin to that of the nobles at the court.

The news of her assassination comes as a brutal blow to her friends, who swear they will take revenge. Mahlin and Shani learn of a plot aimed at concealing the circumstances of the young woman's death from her father. They decide to travel to the North to inform the baron in person.

They are far from imagining they are going straight to a man feared by even the Empire's most powerful lords. A man who carved his legend in letters of blood twenty years earlier by winning the war: the Butcher.

Now bearing the title of Lord of Icevale, Rekk the Butcher has lost none of his cruelty or his might. The murder of his daughter will be avenged, and the Empire itself will quake.

The Seventh Warrior-Mage

(Le Septième Guerrier-Mage)

Paul Beorn

Jal is not only a thief, but also a deserter. Pursued by his former fellow soldiers, he escapes death by a hair.

He is rescued by a woman who asks in exchange that he swear to defend her village against the conquering army he has just betrayed. An army led by the most powerful of the warrior-mages.

Although at first Jal has no intention of honouring his promise, the discovery of this valley miraculously spared by the war calls to mind the land of peace he has been seeking ever since he abandoned his life as a soldier. But he won't delude himself, a handful of villagers stand no chance at all against an army capable of crushing whole cities and entire civilisations.

Soon, violent nightmares are disturbing the young soldier's sleep, dredging up the memories of twelve hitherto forgotten years of his life, and with them, some unexpected abilities... His oath might just allow him to discover who he really is.

Paul Beorn vowed, when he was five, to become ‘the most exciting writer in the whole wide world’. Since then, he committed to keep that promise and has already written several adult fantasy, YA and middle-grade novels which have earned him numerous awards.

- An unputdownable, multi-layered story full of twists and surprises
- A crossover YA/Fantasy by a fast-rising author
- Pleasant and smooth prose with a delightfully unexpected cliffhanger

Calame

Paul Beorn

After a year of civil war in the kingdom of Westalie, the rebels are brutally crushed during an attack on the capital. Their legendary leader, Darran Dahl, is killed in a fight with the king himself, and his supporters are thrown into the dungeons.

D’Arterac, a famous collector of legends with an uncanny ability to discern truth from fiction, discovers young Maura, Darran Dahl’s first lieutenant, in a cell. He offers her a deal: she will be spared execution in exchange for the true story of the rebel leader, a mysterious warrior of obscure beginnings who was said to have been indestructible.

The young girl tells D’Arterac all about Dahl, whose story hides more than one secret... if Maura is telling the whole truth. For she is making the most of her reprieve by formulating a plan to escape and take up the fight again.

Paul Beorn grew up listening to his parents read Tolkien and Roald Dahl to his elder siblings. At the age of five he vowed to become a writer himself – ideally a good one – of stories that make people laugh and cry. He has become a multi-award-winning author (he’s won the Prix Imaginales des Lycéens, the Prix des Incorrupibles, and the Prix Gulli, among others) in all the genres he’s put his pen to.

- Exceptionally commercial concept – this is Dumas with dragons: huge appeal for fans of historical as well as Fantasy novels

The Cardinal's Blades

(Les Lames du Cardinal)

Pierre Pevel

Paris, 1633. The streets are filled with intrigue, duels, spies and adventure. Dragonnets are exotic pets, wyverns are high-class riding mounts, and drac thugs are the coarsest of mercenaries.

But the power rising from Spain and its Court of Dragons is anything but mundane; there the deadly Black Claw cult draws on dragons as they once were: ancient, terrible, utterly merciless, and wielding a dark and powerful sorcery. Their plans contain little room for the lives or freedom of men.

With war on the horizon, Cardinal Richelieu turns to the only person who can counter the dragons' insidious plot: Captain La Fargue, an exceptional swordsman, devoted officer and brilliant leader. With his legendary company of swashbucklers and rogues, only he can have a chance to defeat the enemies of the Crown.

They're the Cardinal's Blades. It's the biggest challenge yet for them – and they'll need to be sharp...

High Kingdom

(Haut-Royaume)

Pierre Pevel

The High Kingdom is facing its darkest hour. Its King has been weakened by illness and many are discontent with the Queen’s regency. As rebellion rumbles throughout the land, new threats are massing forces at the realm’s borders.

Desperate, the King decides to free Lorn, who has spent the past three years locked away on trumped-up charges in the citadel of Dalroth. Acting on the advice of a mysterious emissary of the Dragon, he dubs Lorn ‘Knight of the Onyx Throne’, making him the upholder of royal authority.

Reinstating the Onyx Guard, a once-powerful elite force, Lorn becomes a new figure of hope for his people. But some take a dim view of his growing popularity and influence, and they are busy plotting his downfall.

If he foils his enemies, will he assume the role of champion that the Dragon’s Council of Emissaries have been seeking, the one capable of facing the Black Prince? He must first confront an evil that gnaws at him ever since he was exposed to the Obscure at Dalroth, which now threatens to overwhelm him.

Welcome to Paris of Wonders, one of the gates between our universe and the OtherWorld ruled by the fairy queen.

This could be Paris during the Belle Epoque, but when you look more closely, the Eiffel Tower is built of snow-white wood, mermaids bathe in the Seine, and flying cats roam the roofs of the city.

Louis Denizart Hippolyte Griffont is a gentleman wizard. Charged with investigating illegal trafficking in enchanted objects, he soon finds himself dealing with a series of murders and facing multiple perils: a powerful sorcerer, immortal gargoyles, and above all, forced partnership with Isabel de Saint-Gil, a renegade fairy all-too-familiar to Griffont...

A whirlwind of mysterious events will lift the veil concealing Griffont's past, as well as an ancient secret that threatens to rock the throne of Ambremer, coveted by the Black Queen.

The flamboyant destiny of an elusive thief in Samarande, city of corruption and violence

The Seven Cities

(Les Sept Cités)

Pierre Pevel

Of the Seven Cities, province of the High Kingdom, Samarande is the largest, most famous, and above all, most dangerous.

It is in this violent and corrupt world that Iryän Shaän practices his profession: that of a thief. After getting his hands on a precious tiara, he is then robbed of the jewels that adorn it, and he must find the guilty party and overcome his numerous adversaries – thieves, assassins, magi, and ghosts – through his cunning and might. And the troubles don't end there, because when he frees his friend from rotting away in prison, Iryän antagonizes a formidable group of villains.

An old enemy is returning, and others who are just as dangerous are appearing. When his friend is murdered, Iryän becomes blinded by anger and his desire for vengeance and ready to combat powerful factions, some of whom have been competing for centuries, back to when the Divine Dragons ruled the world. Nothing will stop Iryän – neither man, nor drac, nor dragon prince. He is ready to risk it all, including his life.

The Book and the Sword

(Le Livre et l'Épée)

Antoine Rouaud

Year 10 of the new Republic, in the remote port city of Masalia.

Dun-Cadal, once the greatest general of the Empire, has been drinking his life away for years. Betrayed by his friends and grief-stricken at the loss of his apprentice, he's done with politics, with adventure, and with people. But people aren't finished with him – not yet.

Viola is a young historian looking for the last Emperor's sword, said to have been taken by Dun-Cadal during the Empire's final, chaotic hours. Her search not only leads her to the former general, but embroils them both in a series of assassinations. Dun-Cadal's turncoat friends are being murdered, one by one, in the unmistakable style of an Imperial assassin...

But as Dun-Cadal comes to realize fairly quickly, none of these developments – not even the surprise of meeting his supposedly deceased apprentice – has been the result of chance. An intrigue transcending the fates of the individual characters has been put into motion, and its secrets are revealed one by one as the story unfolds.

Antoine Rouaud was born in 1979. He spent his childhood writing stories, inventing scenarios, and composing songs, before joining a radio station as a production trainee and events organiser. He now works as a copywriter in advertising, and composes, writes and acts in audio drama series, which have already earned him two awards.

The Cyan People are destined to be slaves. The priests read it in the stars, they have been slaves for millennia, and nothing can change it. Or so it's believed. But when Princess Marikani, the last descendant of the Sorcerer-Kings of Arrethas, rescues a mysterious stranger, Arekh, from a shipwreck everything begins to change.

Arekh grudgingly agrees to help Marikani reclaim her throne. But Marikani is a pretender. Born into a Cyan family and swapped with the true princess, it is only after she has taken the throne that Marikani realises she can bring about change... she now has the power, if she chooses, to free her people.

But nothing is ever easy. People around her are growing increasingly suspicious, and when her husband betrays her slave origins to the Inquisition Marikani is forced into hiding.

Denounced as a demon and sentenced to death her battle for freedom is doomed, until the slaves themselves rebel. Civil war breaks out, accompanied by shocking acts of genocide. But amidst the darkness is a spark of hope: Arekh can help Marikani finally lead the Cyan People to freedom.

Leïlan is the Land of Illusions, a mysterious kingdom. These doomed lands, whose borders are closed, are spoken of with respect mingled with fear. A terrible tragedy has fallen upon the royal family. And ever since then, the people of Leïlan have been oppressed by Duke Korta, who is manipulating the king from the shadows behind the throne.

But Axel, a young messenger, has managed to enter the kingdom of Leïlan. And once there he meets a beautiful young girl, and immediately falls in love with her dazzling blue eyes. At the same time, there is new hope in Leïlan: the Mask, a daring and elusive righter of wrongs, constantly defying the duke's authority. Living deep in the Forbidden Forest, he has gathered to his cause a company of loyal men, each of whom has astonishing resources, abilities and daring.

But appearances are deceptive: behind the Mask hides Axel's blue-eyed girl. And Axel himself is a prince hiding a secret of his own: his tragic destiny has been decided by the will of the Three Fairies. Their prophecy decrees that he no longer has the right to fall in love...

(Éternité)

Magali Ségura

In the Saltearth archipelago, a seed containing a gift is received from the gods every 500 years, and an individual is elected to decide how it will be used.

When several minor sorceresses are murdered, Naslie, a descendant of those endowed with the gift of Magic, flees from the Ancient One, whose menacing shadow she has sensed pursuing her over the years.

Her eight-year-old son Jelis goes off to his father, a powerful warrior of the Steel, determined to force his parents to reconcile. But Jelis remains unaware that he represents the impossible fruit of an alliance between Magic and Steel, a combination whose powers are dreaded. Threatened by the devious tricks of a sorcerer and the ghost of a demonic queen, he must place his trust in the counsels of the strange “luminis” who watches over his family.

As their past returns to haunt them, his parents set aside their pride and rancour to resume their quest for the seed of Eternity, confronting their most terrifying memories in the hope of saving their son.

Several centuries have passed since the great war of the magi, but the fortress of Jayad is still standing. Lord Arthak d'Althen and his children Tagan and Vallenn are in charge of this endless watch, but they are unaware that a traitor has made a deal with the demon king. During an evening banquet, Jayad undergoes a surprise attack from the army of demons. Arthak is defeated, but his children manage to flee, along with the intrepid Kalith, the daughter of the master of arms, whom they consider their sister.

While Tagan launches a rebel movement in the mountains, he puts Kalith in charge of escorting and protecting his sister to the king's court. During the course of their journey, the young woman will have the opportunity to learn that she is none other than Gaowhan (the «unique key»), in other words, Daughter of the Stones, and that she is able to channel the demons and send them back into their world.

The Pirates of

the Crooked Claw

(Les Pirates de L'Escroc-Griffe)

Jean-Sébastien Guillerrou

When Caboche, having fled the military orphanage, goes off in search of his father, he certainly never expected to meet the company of the Crooked Claw, and still less to find himself aboard their ship! Led by a disillusioned captain called Bretelle and renowned for never having successfully boarded another ship, the crew looks more like a circus troupe than a band of pirates.

But Caboche is going to take them on an astonishing voyage to the Turquoise Seas, in search of a legendary treasure. Pursued by the invincible and immortal Ghost-Admiral, their dangerous quest will take them to the outer fringes of the Flower-World where the mysterious Forbidden Lands begin... So dangerous in fact that they will lose several crew members, including Caboche, leading Bretelle on a more personal mission to bring his son back to life.

After spending his youth between the Sahara, Jordan, and Japan, Jean-Sébastien Guillerrou studied history and archaeology. From his earliest years, this dreamer has enjoyed journeying in imaginary worlds. He now lives near the Mediterranean Sea he loves so much.

The Skeleton King

(Le Roi Squelette)

Serge Brussolo

Condemned to a life as pariahs, Junia, a young woman of gigantic size, and Shaghan, a boy lacking legs, are the favourite slaves of a blacksmith-mage. A spell permits them to endure the infernal heat of a forge built on top of a volcano, the trade-off being a fatal vulnerability to cold preventing any chance of their escape.

Their survival ensured solely by a potion possessed by their master, Shaghan and Junia are sent out to repair some enchanted armour with defects that are posing problems for a noble client. But the mission turns out to be much more dangerous than expected: the two slaves find themselves forced to cross a cursed land and to confront the Skeleton King in person, an elusive, diabolical entity who embodies the shadowy powers at their nightmarish worst.

The dead obey his commands.
Nothing withstands his anger

Almoha

Serge Brussolo

The Kingdom of Almoha is divided into two parts by an impassable wall.

In the North, humans have turned into monsters, starving as they crawl in the mud. Nath spends his days fighting relentless sentinels and demons lurking in the fog. Too young to die and unwilling to become a monster himself, he has only one way out: if he wants to survive, he has to go over the wall. No one knows what lies on the other side, although stories tell of a beautiful, prosperous land. But how much faith can you place in a legend? Nevertheless, Nath is ready to conquer paradise at any cost.

What Nath finds on the other side is not at all as he imagined: a poisonous version of the Garden of Eden, full of terrifying perils and evil spirits who manipulate Nath and make him their slave. When he finally manages to free himself, true paradise is still a distant hope. Nath arrives in a hellish land, where the human inhabitants are resisting a devastating invasion by creatures of fire. The only weapon the humans possess is a treasure as precious as it is rare: blue gold. Nath must choose his allies carefully: the human underdogs or... their enemies.

Arcadia

Fabrice Colin

London, 1872.

In the world of Arcadia, reality takes on the colors of dreams: an idyllic kingdom, bathed in the magic of faerie, where ministers are poets and artists are kings, where the future is taboo and death an unlikely prospect.

One day, however, strange omens disturb the peacefulness of Arcadia’s magnificent capital. Blue-tinged nights, a ghostly vessel... The painter Rossetti and his friends feel themselves mysteriously drawn. One hundred and forty years later, in a post-apocalyptic Paris submerged beneath the waters, four young lovers of Victorian art hear the same call, and prepare to tear open the veil that separates the two worlds.

To the sound of Excalibur’s song, and to save Arcadia’s queen, a handful of artists take on the role of knights...

Revenge

(Vengeance)

Fabrice Colin

Barkhan’s tale is a tragic one. Born in the Land of the Thousand Canyons, Barkhan was orphaned when invaders – tall, merciless Senthai warriors, clad in black steel – slaughtered his family. Found and raised by the emperor’s brother, in the great city of Dât-Lakhan, he ultimately sacrificed himself for the man who had saved his life. Sentenced to death for a crime he hadn’t committed he escaped the city and fled for his life.

After years of exile, Barkhan can return to his childhood home, for the old Emperor has died, replaced by his brother, and Barkhan and his wife finally reap the rewards of his sacrifice: a Generalship. Sent to fight his old enemy, the Senthai, Barkhan faces them at the gates to the city itself... and discovers too late that it’s a trap. His wife is raped and murdered, and Barkhan himself is killed.

But the tale doesn’t end here ; Barkhan’s death is only the beginning. Because a warrior has appeared, bearing a sword named Revenge. And that’s what he has come to claim – revenge for Barkhan’s death...

Orations

(Oraisons)

Samantha Bailly

In Hélderion, orationers trade in death, reselling the mysterious substance they collect from bodies during funeral rites. An activity which has made a fortune for the Manérien clan. But when the corpse of Mylianne is found murdered in a sordid alley, the cruel reality of death catches up with her two sisters. Aileen decides to do everything in her power to find the killer. An investigation that will result in her uncovering many secrets concerning her country, the schemes of its leader, and even her own father.

Meanwhile, the second sister, Noony, learns that Hélderion is about to invade the neighbouring continent of Redland, even at the price of a terrible massacre. Accompanied by the mysterious Alexian, who turns out to be a spy from Redland, the young woman embarks on a desperate quest to put a halt to the impending conflict. In Redland, she discovers an unknown culture, as well as the sinister truth behind oration, the religious rite she once venerated...

Paris, 1899. The city is filled with flying machines and other technological marvels fuelled by æther, a mysterious source of phenomenal energy.

But the murder of a young woman, who falls from a hansom flying over the Garnier Opera Palace, disturbs the festivities for the Universal Exposition. The crime also involves an automaton, one of the new household machines that serve mankind.

Margaret Saunders decides to carry out her own investigation, helped by her brother Théo, an alienist who has been studying closely the impact of æther on human behaviour.

But things quickly become complicated: the victim's father receives threats; the automaton turns out to be demented, or even worse, intelligent... These are just some of the elements in the mystery our two heroes attempt to unravel.

Mathieu Gaborit

Europe has been submerged by a mysterious and dangerous liquid substance, known as “ecryme”. Linked by a fragile network of steel tracks, only a few cities rise above this corrosive sea, governed by an oppressive capitalist aristocracy. But despite repression by the regime’s sinister Propaganda ministry, there are stirrings of revolt...

Louise Kechelev is a dueling-lawyer and daughter of revolutionaries in Prague. When a dirigible airship transporting contraband goes down in the ecryme, she finds herself charged with recovering its precious cargo. In the same area where the airship crashed, an entire regiment of stilt-walking hussars has succumbed to a sudden outbreak of insanity. A lone survivor, Major Léon Radurin, is now on the run from the agents of Propaganda.

For Louise and Léon, it’s only the beginning of a one-way journey to the region beyond the end of the tracks, where rumour has it there exists a last haven of freedom: Bohemia.

Audric is the 'Demon's Scourge'. The captain of the Serpent Horde owes his nickname to the jointed steel armband that allows him to wield a gigantic sword that no other living man can even lift. It is rumoured that he acquired this superhuman strength by means of some infernal pact.

Audric pays no heed to these rumours, just as he ignores the warnings of his personal soothsayer, Umiade, concerning a young peasant boy he rescued on the battlefield. It was the first time he'd ever intervened to save anyone's life... But the boy, Marween, has seized the opportunity to join up with this band of mercenaries and soon his considerable merits seem to render Umiade's fears groundless.

After a string of successes helps boost the Serpent's prestige, Duke Coresh hires the horde to carry out an extraordinary mission in enemy territory: the abduction of a legendary female soothsayer, capable, not only of foretelling the future, but also of altering its course. Whoever controls her will rule the world...

The son of the queen of Redfelt has been abducted. The ransom is the city's magical sword, in which it is rumoured that the souls of dragons sleep. But the queen's emissaries have vanished, along with the weapon they were to deliver to the kidnappers.

The queen therefore summons Alec, a bounty hunter, and formerly her lover when he was a young officer in the service of the king, her late father. This extraordinary but solitary man is one of the rare few to own a dragon, Arkhan, gifted with intelligence and speech, who is not only his riding mount but also his only true friend.

For Alec has another secret: he is possessed by a succubus who assists him with her powers in exchange for an exclusive claim to his favours. Troubled at meeting once again a woman whom the succubus has forbidden him to love, the adventurer reluctantly agrees to embark on the quest. Astride the back of his dragon, Alec flies off to distant lands in search of the sword and the captive prince...

An old dying woman entrusts Efim Stoïkov, a young Siberian shaman, with the task of looking after a mysterious creature, which shows him the way to the Purple Land, the world of spirits. Surviving the first ordeals of his apprenticeship as a shaman, he emigrates to Saint-Petersburg.

Political conspiracies and sorcerers' fights are common things in the brothels and palaces of the tsarist capital, where the police force has supernatural allies and political plots are reinforced by the power of wizards. In the midst of all this, Efim completes his initiation and is promptly subjected to the domination of the terrifying Queen Sorceresses, and enlisted in their secret war.

Efim's path will cross that of Rasputin. He was told that the doomed monk was his enemy. But behind him lurks another, even more terrifying: the hidden Prince, and occult ruler of the city. To defeat him, Efim will have to step across the Purple Threshold, where the souls of the soldiers who died during the conflict of World War I come. And it is here that his own fate will be decided... and that of the century.

Nineteenth-century London: Mary Graham is found murdered in a dark alley in Whitechapel. It appears that Jack the Ripper has returned. However, this London is a crime-free ‘virtual city’, a theme park re-created to attract tourists.

Roberta Morgenstern, a qualified witch, and her assistant Clement Martineau, fresh out of the police academy, set out to solve the murder. A wild chase through the streets of London brings the heroes face to face with the terrifying new Ripper.

Their mission is to find the man who is bringing these murderers back to life, as the trail of evidence leads them through a number of virtual eras and locations - Paris at the time of Louis XIV, Venice, and finally Montezuma’s Mexico, where they have an assignation with the Devil himself.

Victor Fleury

In the heart of the capital of an ancient empire, Priestess Nisaba is the principal servant of the royal heir, Akurgal. The young woman has many good reasons to despise the ruling family, but she has no choice but to serve her master without protest.

He is notorious for his decadence, and uses and abuses his oblates, the sacred slaves whose senses he has appropriated with his mystical powers. They in return are forced to share the feelings of the prince, his pain, his pleasure, his memory, and more.

When Akurgal decides to go on a crusade to the far reaches of his empire, Nisaba is obliged to follow him and is forced to leave her son behind. Secrets and plots seem to abound in her master's entourage, and the slave priestess is faced with the challenge of trying to protect him and in turn save the entire empire from ruin.

(Le Visiteur du Futur)

Slimane-Baptiste Berhoun & François Descraques

The series Le Visiteur du Futur made its debut on the Internet in 2009 and was an immediate smash success. Shortly after a fourth season was launched at the beginning of 2014, Le Visiteur du Futur drew over 33 million views on the Web.

In 2550, the Earth has been ravaged by a series of disasters that may well spell the end for humanity. Acid rains and zombie attacks are the daily lot of the last remaining survivors.

Among them is the Visitor, who has taken on the mission of cancelling these catastrophes by changing the course of events.

But his past catches up with him. Old friends, stories of lies and betrayal, which he has never revealed to anyone, risk jeopardising his mission.

In 2009, François Descraques created the Frenchnerd website for which he directed several web-series he produced himself, including Le Visiteur du Futur, which soon went viral.

Slimane-Baptiste Berhoun is one of the founding members of the Frenchnerd team, and a writer/director at Brainsonic, creating web-ads and web-series there. He plays the role of Doctor Castafolte in Le Visiteur du Futur.

So Far from Earth

(Très loin de la Terre)

Jean-Pierre Andrevon

In The Time of the Great Hunts, Roll and his clan of seemingly prehistoric (or perhaps post-apocalyptic) men encounter creatures who wear armor fly through the air in ominous steel birds. Soon these two evolutionary alternatives to present-day humanity clash. But which of them represents the more enviable state? And which is the more human?

In The War of the Gruuls, humanity has conquered many planets beyond the solar system, but now finds itself under attack by another intelligent life-form. Able to travel faster than light and armed with a terrible weapon, the invaders threaten to overrun the humans' defenses and cut off all communication between Earth and its colonies.

Finally, in The God of Light, an exploratory vessel from Earth takes a bold interstellar leap and lands on a distant planet, supposedly devoid of life, only to discover the presence of inhabitants who speak English and worship a god that looks suspiciously like a spaceship. How is this possible? Has something affected Time itself?

The Complete Novels

Julia Verlanger

Ranging from pure science fiction to space opera and fantasy, Julia Verlanger's bitterly beautiful novels rank among the best works from France's «Anticipation» brand of fantastic fiction that emerged after World War II.

Verlanger creates fascinating post-apocalyptic worlds and depicts lands ravaged by bacteriological warfare –strangely evocative of Mad Max– as well as space operas dramatizing mankind's expansion into the cosmos and developing themes as old as the myths of Antiquity. In all her universes, she offers a subtle mix of extrapolation and fantasy, teeming with brilliant ideas and breathtaking adventures.

Whatever the subject, her narrative style is impeccable and finely wrought with strong and powerful imagery.

‘A must-have for all SF fans’

Supremacy

(Suprématie)

Laurent McAllister

Over the millennia, humanity has spread to the Cluster, a group of stars located in a distant arm of our galaxy. But the humans and other intelligent races who settled here are threatened by a highly effective system of mind control, imposing a uniform society and crushing all dissent: Supremacy. One after another, by subtle ruse or brutal force, the independent worlds of the Cluster are being absorbed into its vision of reality.

Now only a single ancient warship and its mercenary crew, commanded by a legendary captain, stand in the way of complete conquest. But Captain Alcaïno, a renegade escapee from a Supremacist prison, knows how the enemy operates. And he has a plan...

Supremacy is an inventive, sprawling space opera, full of vivid worlds and inhabitants, outrageous technologies, and bold, romantic heroes.

Oregon

Pierre Pelot

France is living under a military dictatorship, its citizens manipulated and under surveillance. In remote areas of the French countryside, rebels are trying to infiltrate the government to weaken the established order.

Oregon, age 25, works in the Predictive Safety Section, where her assignment is to manipulate information. In an abandoned house in rebel territory, Oregon and her brother wait for their father, head of the sinister militia in charge of subduing the rebellion. One day, a mortally wounded man collapses at their door. He is a Storyteller, the keeper of a fragmented collective memory. During drug-induced trances, he tells the history of the world and of a war that no one will talk about.

He urges Oregon to search for the truth. Who is responsible for the worldwide amnesia? What is it hiding? Finding out will cost dearly, and when you open your mind to the truth in this world, you are often banished from it.

Born in 1945, Pierre Pelot has written more than two hundred novels published throughout the world. His work spans genres, from science fiction to thrillers, westerns, and literature. He is one of the greatest French sci-fi writers, and his Été en pente douce was adapted for film with great success.

Sascha's Requiem

(Requiem pour Sascha)

Alice Scarling

An orphan, Sascha has no idea how she came to have her strange power: she can possess people by mere touch. She uses it to eliminate any vampires who cross her path, in the hope of one day finding those responsible for slaughtering the nuns who raised her.

But her life changes radically when she meets Raphaël, a fallen angel immune to her power (and feminine charms) who gives her the means of wreaking her revenge. From cemeteries to Goth bars, their hunt for the master of the city's vampires leads them straight into the claws of a much more powerful creature: the Devil himself. And he wants only one thing: to find his beloved daughter, lost years before!

Destined from birth to unleash the Apocalypse, Sascha sees no other solution than to sacrifice herself. But Zekiel, the fiendishly irresistible demon general sent to bring her back to her father in Hell, and Raphaël's own brother, may turn out an unexpected ally...

All the pieces are in place, and the greatest chess game in human history is about to begin... The future of the human race rests in the hands of a bereft young woman who will choose the path her heart dictates.

Alice Scarling was born in 1984. Her passion for fantasy literature has become her field of expertise: vampires, succubi and werewolves hold no secrets for her. She embodies a new, original and sexy voice within French paranormal romance.

Saint Mary of the Shadows

(Sainte Marie des Ombres)

Sophie Dabat

For more than twenty years, the Shadows have haunted the world, devouring every living being within their reach. Except for one little girl, no one has ever survived their poison. But the girl became a laboratory rat subjected to cruel experiments, before her parents sacrificed themselves to save her.

After several years spent on the run from the government and fighting to survive, Lily Turner has become a woman almost like any other. A tattoo artist, she shares her life with her boyfriend and her dog, and no one knows that she was once nicknamed 'Saint Mary of the Shadows', the healer. But a series of murders risks changing everything she built, and forces Lily to make difficult choices, both to protect herself and to save those she loves... And meanwhile she must face up to a painful truth: her immunity to the vile creatures could be humanity's only hope.

Born in 1979 near Marseille, Sophie Dabat moved to Brittany after abandoning architecture in favour of the arts of publishing. A reader, translator, and proof-reader, she organises writers' workshops and has published numerous short stories, an essay and several novels of dark fantasy and urban fantasy.

H. V. Gavriel

- A daring and heart-wrenching gay paranormal romance
- Written in an emotionally charged style that will touch readers with its appealing and true-to-life characters
- A rich and detailed universe with a carefully thought-out mythology

Lucas travels across the United States, without daring to stay long in any one place. The young man knows he's being hunted and fears he will not survive if the shadowy forces on his trail ever catch up with him. Upon arriving in the small town of North Cascades, Lucas finds a job, an apartment, and even a friend: Léo. But the shadows, embodied by his half-brother, locate him and start to methodically slaughter those close to him. Just when he's on the point of giving up the fight, he is rescued by Léo's father, Marcus, a werewolf.

While the young man tries to coexist with this enemy species to his own and not let himself be carried away by his feelings for Marcus, his half-brother remains determined to destroy him at all costs and thereby avenge the affront Lucas inflicted upon him years earlier. But as he experiences love, betrayals, and self-discovery, Lucas will be forced to find the means of protecting his new adoptive family, even though he risks their hatred if they ever discover who he really is.

Jesse Christen

In Dust City, might makes right.

Killian knows this only too well – his own brother, Damon, has risen to the top of one of the city's most powerful clans. A life style that Kill is seeking to flee at all costs, which does not prevent him from experiencing a powerful fascination with Damon.

Abducted, Kill finds himself in the hands of Damon's sworn enemy, the mysterious Sin, who is seeking to avenge the terrible loss he has just suffered. Kill has no illusions about his fate: he won't come out alive from this struggle between the two clan chiefs.

Yet the greatest danger he faces may be the feelings Sin inspires in him...

He will end up becoming deeply attached to this gangster who is more fragile than he looks, to the point of being forced to choose between the ties of blood and those of his heart.

Cécile Duquenne

The peaceful existence of Népomucène, funeral home director, is disturbed by a dangerous serial killer. Népomucène fears that he may be the next target. His devoted friend, Bob, a 150-year-old vampire, investigates the case, convinced that the murderer is not human. The undertaker grows increasingly worried as Bob takes more and more risks to protect him... But the undead don’t die, do they? Bob may find out when he attends a very strange reception held by the mysterious Dorian Gray, who feeds on his guests’ souls. Can Bob save his own soul from the greedy host?

The beautiful Gabrielle would also prefer not to sell her soul to the devil. Her job consists in fighting supernatural creatures who threaten our world. But an alchemical virus developed by her brother is turning even relatively harmless demons into bloodthirsty monsters. Faced with this outbreak, Gabrielle’s sworn enemies may turn out to be her most precious allies.

David Calvo

The end of the world is coming. Tomorrow. So for those of us with things still to do, the clock is ticking. The pale moon is beginning to wane, threatening men in black are kidnapping people, and dark plots are growing as, with the final deadline approaching, spies start working harder than ever.

Yet some things stay the same. At Blue FM the DJ plays music and talks to his listeners, trying to ease their anxieties – and along the way, dropping some tantalising hints about what is to come...

Margot, a young girl with some astonishing, magical abilities, also seems to know what's coming. And, being aware that the end is almost nigh, she intends to party her way through every last minute of it at the Trafalgar Square Dance Contest.

And Doctor Loom is on a desperate quest. His wife is dying of sadness, unless he can find a mysterious film with the potential to restore her happiness. But Loom isn't alone in searching London for a movie. The mysterious men in black are hunting as well – scouring the city streets for a film that no one has ever seen.

The end of the world is coming...

The White Abbey

(L'Abbaye blanche)

Laurent Malot

Lieutenant Gange is raising his six-year-old daughter on his own in a mountain village in the Jura. His wife left a few months ago without saying why and they haven't heard from her since.

When two murders occur in the same week in this remote community where «nothing ever happens», Gange becomes embroiled in an explosive investigation. Little by little, all clues point to the White Abbey, a dangerous cult linked to local notables. Between art trafficking, lost souls, and high-level government officials, he gradually unravels the threads of the case and finds himself in over his head.

But he also thinks he may have found an answer to his wife's disappearance...

In the heart of the Beauce region, a quadruple murder has shaken the town of Étampes. An unspeaking teenager, covered in blood, is found with a knife in his hand in front of the house of the victims. He is immediately interned in a psychiatric hospital. Has he been radicalised? Or was it simply a moment of madness? Media speculation feeds the townspeople's fear.

Neither Lieutenant Gange, now far from his native Jura region, nor his partner Sam, nor the psychiatrist assigned to work with them, believe it was madness. Gange arrests a young man found causing trouble in the street, and later meets the individual's mother, a seductive and powerful woman who seems ready to do anything to protect her son.

Environmental protection, elite power, education and even terrorism are some of the themes that emerge as Gange follows the trail of a dangerous psychopath, oblivious to the fact that he is putting his own kin in danger.

Arcames looks like a small, serene and picturesque village in the French countryside, but it might be the crucible of an apocalyptic cult preparing the unspeakable. People keep their mouths shut here, and outsiders are suspect.

When two police detectives are put in charge of investigating the disappearance of a young woman, all clues lead them to this place that appears to be under the control of a secret congregation with mystic aims. They have barely received their mission when they become the victims of a series of brutal attacks. Pursued by a highly trained paramilitary group that doesn't seem to belong to any official organisation, they fear for their lives and decide to set the record straight in Arcames.

But they are far from imagining what is hiding in the bowels of the village and the forces they are facing.

Is the hospital haunted?

A series of apparently motiveless murders has rocked the Hôtel-Dieu hospital in Nantes. Police captain Ael Guivarch, an obsessive perfectionist and a methodical rationalist, refuses to believe in a supernatural cause for the escalating violence, certain there must be a logical explanation. But his quest for truth risks endangering his deepest convictions... and perhaps even more.

With Légion, David Forrest delivers a novel that weaves back and forth between the crime and horror genres in a tale that combines terror, suspense, and black comedy, keeping the reader dangling until the very last pages.

Légion and Prométhium are the first two volumes in a trilogy but can be read independently. Faithful readers will come across allusions and characters previously encountered in one or the other.

A radioactive body fallen from the sky triggers a series of events that will lead police lieutenant Inès Herrera into a dizzying spiral of death.

Pursued by sinister individuals prepared to do anything in order to make the irradiated corpse and any evidence of its existence disappear, she takes refuge with the only person she can trust, her former boss in the criminal investigation squad, who, since reviving from a coma several months earlier, has been living secluded at home.

The young woman succeeds in persuading him to help her and the pair embark on a frantic chase, as both hunters and prey, into the heart of a far-reaching plot aimed at covering up incredible secrets.

Faced with unexpected enemies and unimaginable dangers, they must overcome their own inner demons in order to survive.

'Emily Roy and Alexis Castells make a terrific, original duo.'

'They have a future'

The Times

Block 46

Johana Gustawsson

Falkenberg, Sweden. Police superintendent Bergström finds the frozen naked body of a woman at Olofsbo beach.

London. A renowned profiler, the taciturn Emily Roy investigates a series of murders of children whose savagely mutilated bodies present the same wounds as the Swedish victim.

A strange thing for a serial killer, to change both the type of prey and the hunting grounds... or is it in fact a pair of sociopaths at work?

The numerous questions raised by the two cases send Emily Roy to Sweden, where she meets an old acquaintance, the tenacious Alexis Castells, a French writer who specialises in serial killers.

These two women with opposite personalities will have to chase killers as elusive as they are perverse.

'A bold and intelligent read'

The Guardian

Born in 1978 in Marseille and with a degree in political science, Johana Gustawsson has worked as a journalist for the French press and television. She married a Swede and lives now in London. She was the co-author of a bestseller, On se retrouvera, published by Fayard Noir in France, whose television adaptation drew over 7 million viewers.

‘Johana Gustawsson has taken the thriller into a new dimension. Her subtle and surprising novels are the fruit of an immense talent.’

Karen Sullivan, Orenda Books

Mör

Johana Gustawsson

Torvsjön, 16 July 2015. The dismembered body of a woman, minus several pounds of flesh, is found on the shores of a Swedish lake.

London, the next morning. The profiler Emily Roy is called to a crime scene. The actress Julianne Bell has been abducted and her shoes have been found nearby, neatly wrapped in a freezer bag.

These two crimes bear all the hallmarks of Richard Hemfield, the “Terror of Tower Hamlets”. But for the past decade he has been in the high-security Broadmoor psychiatric hospital, serving a life sentence for the murder of six women and of the partner of French writer Alexis Castells. So how could he possibly be linked to these latest crimes?

Emily and Alexis team up to track down a voracious and terrifying killer, plunging into the labyrinth of a perverse mind that harks back to the ill-famed streets of Victorian London.

‘An audacious writer, rimming with talent.’

Yannick Monget

At the headquarters of the United Nations, the anxiety is palpable. A mysterious epidemic has broken out, and soon millions will die.

In these frightening circumstances Alexander Grant, head of a New York biotechnology company, meets Anne Cendras, a prominent French biologist, while travelling to the Amazon Basin. She’s convinced a sudden and terrible change in the balance of the world’s ecosystem is happening. The behavior of animals has modified, while plant species show highly aberrant mutations.

No international organization has the means to combat the epidemic. Western society is on the verge of collapse. But a few individuals in Europe and the USA are determined to fight back, to understand the causes of this environmental cataclysm, and to stop it in its tracks.

Malhorne

Jérôme Camut

Malhorne comes from the dawn of mankind. He’s crossed the borders of death, and lived countless lives throughout history. Now he’s going to reveal himself to the world.

When anthropologist Franklin Adamov discovers a statue hidden deep in the Amazonian forest he has no idea of the true extent of the mystery he has stumbled upon. The statue alone is a puzzle: dated to the fifteenth century, it shows a Caucasian man holding a sword. And written on it is a single word: Malhorne. But how can it be here, in a part of the world that’s almost impossible to reach now – let alone five hundred years ago, carrying a statue.

With the help of a mysterious foundation Franklin agrees to solve his Amazonian enigma... just when another statue is discovered, more than a continent apart from the first, the two artefacts are identical, and someone wants answers.

So the hunt begins, leading Franklin to an asylum in New England, and to a young man with an astonishing tale to tell. He claims that he made the statues, that there are seven of them scattered around the world, and that each of them is part of a greater puzzle. One that offers, as its solution, the truth about the origins of humanity...

Jérôme Camut was born in 1968. He is a film and television scriptwriter.

Brittany, tomorrow:

An electrical power outage plunges the small lives of Blanche and Hadrien into darkness, along with whole of Europe. A mysterious rumour filters through the radio waves: the government is concealing something going on in the south... Is it war? Their daughter is far away, on holiday in Spain. Hadrien decides to leave immediately in search of her, but Blanche is afraid.

Paris, the day after tomorrow:

A state of emergency has been declared, and the people are gagged. Blanche has become Bianca, a member of the resistance. The opponents to the dictatorship over the media employ consumer networks to get their messages out, on chicken baskets, detergent barrels, or inside fortune cookies, but soon more drastic measures will be needed. Bianca finds strength in the arms of Joshua, and she never speaks of Hadrien, or of her daughter.

Something dramatic happened on the road.

Thierry Crouzet

- A text scientifically approved by dozens of international researchers, published at a time when the World Health Organization has called antibiotic resistance a global crisis
- A riveting thriller that both entertains and raises awareness of a global problem
- A book that will appeal to all medical-related professions across the world, including pharmaceutical laboratories

Katelyn, a medical student, is working a summer job on a billionaire's yacht when a deadly epidemic wipes out all the passengers. The killer bacteria, nicknamed adversus, is resistant to all known treatments.

Katelyn is somehow immune and is the sole survivor. She's recruited and trained by the Anti-Bioterrorism Centre and is sent on a secret mission to bring in the infector, even if this requires getting very close to him. She soon realises the man she is hunting down may not be the cold-blooded killer she's been warned of, and her growing feelings for him may begin to affect her judgement.

Katelyn is thrown into a race against time as she discovers a labyrinthine medical world and glimpses a possibly apocalyptic future for humanity.

This novel is more scientific fiction than science fiction. Both entertaining and a mine of information, it is also a cry of alarm about the growing human resistance to antibiotics.

Jeanne Faivre d'Arcier

This is the Pigalle of legend, a disappeared Paris peopled by artists, bourgeois, lowlife, and whores.

One morning as he sets out to buy his daily croissant, old Antoine spots a set of drawers dumped on the sidewalk. In one drawer is a tiny baby. Immediately the entire neighborhood swings into action to look after the abandoned girl, whom they name Cerise, and to save her from a grim future in an orphanage. The child is secretly passed from neighbor to neighbor, always managing to stay one step ahead of the local cops.

The police explore various theories as to how the girl ended up in the drawer. A kidnapping? Nasty parents who dumped their newborn? Was a network of pedophiles behind it? Or something even more sinister? For Pigalle has always been the scene of the most heinous of crimes.

Whatever the truth, Cerise brings seemingly endless problems to the entire neighborhood. And, somewhere in the city, a distressed young woman is looking for her baby...

Jeanne Faivre d'Arcier lives in the Pigalle district of Paris and is the author of a dozen crime and fantasy novels for both adults and younger readers. She has won the Grand Prix de l'Imaginaire.

Mati is nine years old. She has lost her mother. Her father is wallowing in grief and it is left to her grandmother to take care as best she can of what remains of the family. One day, Mati doesn't come home from school. She has gone off with her "angel", Rémi, a young man in his twenties who suffers from mild autism. Rémi works at the post office, where he has taken to replying to the letters Mati has been sending to her mother in her new home in heaven.

As the pair escape from their drab existences, everyone fears the worst. And the worst comes to pass. The father is injured and left paralysed. The grandmother, now desperate, tells him a terrible secret. Mati will return, but her "angel" will be the victim of fierce prejudice.

The world has not understood the purity of their intentions, their childhood innocence untouched by scheming and secrets. How could anyone believe that it all really did begin with the best of intentions?

In the 1950s, a psychiatric hospital in a windswept place deep in the countryside fuels countless rumours among residents of nearby villages. When the mutilated body of a child is found in the asylum courtyard, this does not seem to particularly interest the director, the psychiatrist, or even the local gendarmes.

But the arrival of Lucie, a young student of the eminent psychoanalyst Lacan, does attract much attention. She has come to study a patient suffering from prosopagnosia, a disorder that leaves sufferers unable to recognize faces, who may be able to help her find the perpetrator of a grisly murder on the Rue des Martyrs in Paris. But the chief psychiatrist, a brute of a man, is as hostile to Lucie's inquiries as he is to the methods of psychoanalysis.

Lucie has no idea how dangerous snooping around the asylum will prove to be. What lurks there goes beyond all imaginable horrors, even those of the Massacre of the Rue des Martyrs.

Soul of London

Gaëlle Perrin-Guillet

London, winter 1892. As he can now only walk with the help of a cane, Inspector Henry Wilkes has been reduced to tracking dog killers in the tunnels of the Underground. Billy Bennett, a street urchin, is his assistant.

When Alice Pickman, a young lady of good family, asks him to reopen the inquiry into the death of her sister, Wilkes unwittingly enters a minefield. As a worthy heir to Sherlock Holmes, he seeks to dissipate the fog that envelops the city of Jack the Ripper, the mist that is a heady mix of coal, lies and perversion.

Especially as the body of a girl, found with her head smashed open in an underground passage, will link the two cases.

An old flame, secret grudges: a story of second chances in sunny Spain

For Better or for Worse

(Pour le meilleur et pour le pire)

Suzanne Roy

Jennifer is proud of her life in Montreal. She has a stimulating career and a boyfriend who pampers her, and she doesn't need anything else – especially not her estranged husband!

Yet there Bruno is, eight years after the marvelous summer they spent on his property in Spain. They fell madly in love, got married, and then separated for reasons still unknown to him. Now he is demanding that she return to Spain, in order to get divorced as soon as possible because he plans on remarrying soon.

Jennifer is forced to return to the place she had wished to forget and revisit their past. These two fiery temperaments in constant conflict could reignite the flame of an all-consuming passion...

- A story about secrets and second chances in spite of obstacles, with revelations right up to the end
- The idyllic and caliente setting of a vineyard property in Spain
- A rhythmic and sexy romance

In a few short hours, Charlotte's life has turned upside down. Just when she was about to announce to her fiancé that she was pregnant, he was killed in a motorcycle accident. Now she finds herself alone with her doubts, the emptiness that Alex left behind him, and an impossible decision to make – whether or not to keep the child.

Amid this turmoil, Charlotte does her best to welcome Alex's grieving family: his mother and his brother, who have just arrived from England. Very quickly, Brenda and Carl win the young woman's trust, and make her a proposal that seems a little crazy: that of wedding Carl in a marriage of convenience in order to provide the child-to-be with a family. In exchange, they promise her unwavering support, family love, and financial comfort.

An arrangement that Charlotte will accept, without suspecting she will fall in love with Carl for real. But life has other fateful blows in store for Charlotte... Will she find happiness again despite her hardships?

For as long as she can remember, Elina has had only one mission, one reason for being: she appears at the bedside of the dying and guides the soul detached from its body to the door it must cross. She has no idea what awaits the human souls on the other side, and she has no desire to find out. She does not care much at all about them; after all, they had their time on Earth, and they should have made the best of it, right?

Until the day she lets a soul escape... a soul whose body has returned to life thanks to the stubborn efforts of a doctor in emergency services. And then it happens again... Caught short, Elina no longer has any choice: she must discover what makes this man so special.

Her fate is sealed when she finds herself abandoned on Earth, frightened and disoriented, with a single name on her lips: that of Éric Séguin, the doctor who will change her life.

Being a field operative for a private security company is no bed of roses! But Linda loves her job, far from the humdrum of everyday life.

During a solo mission in Paris, she meets a stranger on a café terrace while she's staking out a building. Charmed by the man, she indulges in a night of passion in his arms. She certainly doesn't expect to run into him later, in the same building where she is trying to hide microphones! So who is this mysterious and seductive Leandro? Could he be a spy on a mission, too? Or was he hired to get rid of her?

One thing is sure – Linda will not let herself get reeled in again by those gorgeous hazel eyes. This guy owes her an explanation, and a good one, if he hopes to keep his family jewels!

The day – or rather, the night – Chris met Kate, things didn’t really go by the book. He drank far too much and wandered into the wrong tent. Furious, she threatened him with a harpoon gun.

But you don’t want to get on the wrong side of a guy like Chris. His bad boy way of life represents everything Kate is trying to avoid. She has had enough problems, with the death of her mother and the responsibility of her little sister on her shoulders. Yet there is a strange attraction that immediately draws them to one another, almost against their will.

Chris isn’t really like those bad guys Kate has met in the past. He hasn’t chosen this life, and he is struggling in a world that has made him a victim as much as a persecutor. If Kate can see beyond appearances, will others be able to do the same, or does the young man risk paying a very high price for his actions ?

Adrian Sheffield is a virtuoso pianist considered a genius by many. Alas he is also a young man with quite a nasty character, whose biting and decidedly off-color sense of humour eventually leads to him getting fewer and fewer invitations to play concerts.

One day he receives a threatening letter and his agent decides to hire a bodyguard to protect him, while also using the opportunity to put his client back in the media spotlight. The bodyguard is an enthusiastic and very professional young woman called Carrie. But Adrian, annoyed because he sees women as unfit to do such work properly, decides to make Carrie's life hell.

As this odd couple slowly get to know each other, the obnoxious mask the pianist presents to the world slowly comes off and a much more appealing character emerges.

Alexandra, a dynamic young business woman from California, has always been fascinated with France. She discovers that she herself has French roots when she comes across a photo of her ancestor Gabrielle D'Arcy, posing in front of the Château of Ferté-Chandeniers. She determines to find out everything there is to know about this woman who left her country for America a century ago.

Alex travels to France to the village of Chandeniers, where she gets to know Eric, the new owner of the once magnificent château, which is now half-ruined after a fire in the 1900s. But Eric turns against this American who has invited herself into the homestead that was so dear to his father, and which he is at such pains to protect from would-be buyers who care little for preserving its heritage.

It was in this place that Gabrielle dreamed, doubted, and lived a great love, and it is here that her descendant, walking in her footsteps, just might meet her own destiny.

- The history of fashion, inspired by Emile Zola's novel, Au bonheur des dames (The Ladies' Delight)

‘A feel-good story and a pretty romance, both sweet and elegant, that’s a pleasure to read...’

Au Boudoir Écarlate

Rose de Saulnay, a quiet young woman belonging to the upper classes, has a passion for fashion which she expresses by creating superb dresses in secret. But her husband, a violent and possessive man, finds this pastime unworthy of her social rank and disapproves of her behaviour.

At a grand ball, she meets Alexander Wright, the French capital’s most renowned couturier. Her husband hires him to design an outfit for Rose, and it’s love at first sight. When divorce becomes legal in France in July of that year, Rose finds the courage to take her life in her own hands. She leaves her spouse at last and opens a dress-making shop.

Despite the difficulties of her situation and society’s rejection of her, Rose gradually wins her independence and, thanks to Alexander Wright, regains her faith in the future... and in love.

A man, a woman, an impossible love story. Their relationship is first of all two points of view, each with its own version of events. Heads for hers, tails for his. From the terrace of a Parisian café, he observes her while she notices him, and soon, their eyes do more than meet; they seek one another out. He’s married and the father of two children. She has just left her companion and is starting a new life.

Through the accounts of these two tormented lovers, the one tinted by the woman’s sensibility, her doubts and hopes, the other displaying a thorough masculine pragmatism, we discover surges of passion, but also the lies and the things left unsaid behind which this couple takes refuge in order to live this doomed relationship.

(Ce qui nous lie)

Samantha Bailly

Alice is no ordinary young woman. Upon the death of her grandmother, a year earlier, a gift came to her: the ability to see the emotional attachments of every person she meets. These bonds appear to her in the form of luminous threads, creating before her eyes a veritable web between people. Unable to explain the phenomenon, Alice learns to live with it in deepest secrecy.

Seeking the truth following a difficult break-up, she uses it at first to detect unfaithful lovers and denounce them, acting as an avenger of wronged women. This daily dose of lies and revenge soon weighs upon her, however, and she decides to resume the course of her life, starting with her career.

She joins a recruitment agency, where she discovers the on-going rivalries between her colleagues and the joys of working in an open-plan office. But she also meets Raphaël, her new boss, who seems to be mysteriously immune to her power. Though she gave up on love, here she is after all, falling for the one man she can't read!

While her sixth sense allows her a better understanding of the world around her, she is simply unable to figure him out. And yet the attraction is irresistible...

A student in communications, Ophélie has always dreamed of working in the creative arts industry. But when her application is accepted for an internship at Pyxis, a dynamic company specializing in entertainment, her initial euphoria is soon replaced by anxiety. She has to leave everything behind her to move to the capital, where her difficulties begin: finding a flat, adapting to the workplace, living on a few hundred euros a month...

Arthur is a student at one of the most prestigious business schools in Paris. He likes partying, often cheats on his girlfriend "by accident", and has trouble accepting the path chosen for him by his parents. His internship at Pyxis is the perfect opportunity to escape from the world of finance, and he soon realizes that he would be willing to go wearing jeans to work rather a tie for a while longer.

In a young and attractive setting, these two characters will discover the reality of the workplace and form attachments with their colleagues, despite the question which really nags at them: at the end, who will obtain a real job?

And yet, a simple anonymous letter is about to alter their fates... if they're willing to gamble on a wild chance and pay heed to their feelings.

Gamble? Chance? The two of them are about to discover what the word ‘trust’ really means. Can one become attached to another human being simply through words, and change one’s path for a complete stranger?

We all need a shoulder to lean on, but are we aware of what that implies?

In a time when people communicate mainly by e-mails and text messages, this book allows us to discover the pleasures of handwritten correspondence, and ambiguity. And the fear of revealing oneself, of actually meeting for real.

Charlotte Bousquet

When her best friend gets ruthlessly dumped through Facebook and asks for her help to get her revenge, Fanny agrees to set a trap for the oaf: she is supposed to seduce him by passing herself off as his ideal type of woman thanks to her acting skills, before rejecting him and – hopefully – breaking his heart.

The ploy works, but her friend's jealousy and the pleasure Fanny starts to find in playing the part of the perfect girl threatens their friendship. The border between reality and the different characters she adopts becomes increasingly blurred, and it doesn't help matters when Fanny meets a man who is going to play havoc with all these notions, challenging her to surpass herself and leave her fears behind.

So here she is, a prisoner of several roles at the precise moment when she encounters the person who could love her for who she really is...

In Eden's Own Words

(Les Mots d'Eden)

Céline Etcheberry

It's the last year of high school for Eden – the end of his stormy adolescence in a small town in the United States, where he's stuck between a capricious mother and a wealthy but absent father.

His world has just been turned upside down by the death of another student, and by the distress of this student's brother, which affects Eden deeply. While the young man is experiencing his first romantic relationships, he doesn't stop hanging around this boy, until the moment when they finally allow themselves to express their love for one another.

It's a love that is very quickly and harshly put to the test. Damien's parents are fiercely opposed to their relationship, to the point that they force the young man to go study at a military academy and make it seem as if he has died to Eden, who has just moved to New York for his studies.

Sinking into the depths of grief, Eden finds himself in the hands of a psychotherapist who is not too professional and much too seductive. Pulled into a game that eludes him, Eden does not suspect that Damien is about to come back into his life to try to win his heart once again.

Céline Etcheberry has had a passion for writing since childhood, and she loves taking trips to every corner of the world. In her stories, at once incredible and unsettling, modest and subdued, there are always very human heroes, characters full of errors and contradictions who never leave readers indifferent.

- A breath-taking and well-executed gay romance, with gorgeous erotic scenes
- A reflection on the difficulties of being openly gay in a sports world as macho as European football
- Both alternating points of view, showing their intensifying desire and their rising doubts, give a true rhythm to the text

When you're a professional footballer, it's not easy to protect your private life, and even less to open about being gay.

Wade Perkins knows it only too well. Captain of the Manchester team and popular with the supporters, he's been pretending to be a womanizer for years now. And what if that makes it impossible for him to find true love? He's willing to live with it. At least, that's what he believes, until Nikki joins his team. The attraction between Wade and the newcomer is immediate, but what kind of relationship can the two men build without destroying their careers, or even their lives...?

Even worse, Nikki's transfer seems to be linked to a rather murky affair involving his former team. Yet he's the one who will teach Wade that, sometimes, one needs to let the masks fall, even at the risk of losing everything, in order to have a chance at being happy.

At the age of fourteen, the lives of Reagan and Vic become inextricably entwined. They were kidnapped and sequestered for four of their teenage years. They endured the most awful abuse, but despite their suffering, they loved each other. When their captivity finally came to an end, life and the conservatism of their parents conspired to separate them.

Today, ten years after their release, as the trial of their torturer begins and justice is about to be done, their paths will cross again. They have changed, and the scars left by years of suffering have forged their characters.

When the present plunges them back into their nightmarish past, Reagan and Vic will discover that the wounds inflicted on their love are still wide open.

Positive Way

Chloé Bertrand

Alice had met him that evening, at one of his concerts at a pub in the centre of London, wearing her ever-present camera on a strap around her neck – it was her way of looking at the world.

He was up on the stage singing, with his blue Mohawk, his crutch, and his arm and leg in plaster. Alice thought it was a miracle that he could even stand – and she didn't know yet how right she was. Marked by life, fleeing the tedium of everyday reality, he had no idea that meeting her was going to change his vision of the world and give him a fresh start.

Friends, wanderings, the rooftops of London, photomontages, songs, Alice's window. Just another story, perhaps – except it's theirs. And what was bound to happen happens: Alice becomes Thomas's miracle, a small miracle all to himself ...

'You lost your Mohawk somewhere,' she remarked with a small pout. It was at that precise moment he fell in love with her.

Born in 1994, Chloé Bertrand was very small when she fell into the world of books. Since then she's never stopped writing. After spending a year in London, Chloé moved to Montreal to study creative writing. As always, her favourite heroes followed her: Harry Potter, but also Cyrano de Bergerac, Artemis Fowl, and all of Pierre Bottero's characters.

- A very appealing heroine with plenty of character

Newly engaged and an editor of young-adult fiction, Annabelle is faced with a daunting challenge: how to tame John, her publishing house's hottest author, specializing in S&M erotic novels. This intriguing and charismatic man is very demanding in his choice of the people with whom he is willing to work. Convinced that she has no expertise in this field and that he will never agree to having her as his editor, Annabelle quickly realizes that, on the contrary, John finds her profile particularly appealing. Determined to rise to the occasion, the young woman tries to put her preconceived notions to one side, but how far will she go to satisfy him?

While she relies on her unmatched professionalism, he takes perverse pleasure in throwing her off-balance and arousing her curiosity in order to attract her to him... So that little by little she finds herself drawn into a sexy, lascivious world from which she may never be able to leave.

Adam is handsome, intelligent, wealthy, and terribly lonely. Heart-broken since his divorce with a famous actress, he refuses to maintain any prolonged relationships and contents himself with the services of escort girls to accompany him at society events.

One evening, he meets a bewitching, independent young woman, nothing like his usual partners. After exchanging a few words with him, she invites him to join her in a hotel room. But this beautiful stranger is by no means a call girl: she's a wounded woman who can only experience carnal relations as a form of pain, a way of expiating her sins.

Adam lets himself be caught up in this game of domination in which feelings are in principle forbidden, at the risk of falling in love with this woman with a troubled past...

Paris, 1778. Élisabeth d'Arsac is a ravishing young woman who turns the head of every man she meets. Attached to her freedom, she wants to experience love without the inconveniences of marriage.

She meets a dark, handsome stranger during a costumed ball and, between two dances, she indulges in an amorous interlude with him which awakens all sorts of new sensations inside her.

A few days later, the mysterious stranger is received in the salon of the d'Arsac family. This young American seems all the more attractive as he shares Élisabeth's innovative ideas concerning women's education. She arranges a secret rendezvous at an inn to take him as her lover. It is only then that he realises that she is a virgin.

This leaves him no choice: in order not to dishonour her, he must ask for her hand in marriage. Élisabeth is convinced that her father will reject his proposal, but to her surprise he agrees to let her marry him.

What Élisabeth has always dreaded the most has come to pass: she is now someone's wife. It's hardly the most auspicious start to married life, but love soon conquers all...

Ilona Kowalsk is young and beautiful. It's her job – she's a model. She gets up early, does lots of sport, eats little, doesn't drink, doesn't go out. But that is no way to find a soul mate. She intimidates most men, and those she doesn't scare away seem to only want to be seen strutting with her on their arm.

Lucie Chanterelle, her accomplice and agent, is five foot two and weighs 180 pounds. She may not be in the same league as Ilona but she has lots more luck with men. She never holds back when it comes to eating, drinking, or socialising. Maybe that's why men find her irresistibly sexy?

When Zlotan Marvelis, a fashion designer on his way to greatness, decides to hire Ilona, Lucie decrees that it is time for her friend and protégée to learn to relax. So she calls on her pal Pierre Barbier, a part-time gigolo, who immediately falls for Ilona's fragile charm. But Ilona asks him for help in her plan to seduce her boss, Zlotan. Pierre reluctantly agrees, all the while trying to keep his real job a secret from Ilona.

Maïa Loup

Alice can no longer bear to live alone with her father, who has been stuck under a little cloud of sadness ever since the departure of his wife. Her gift of being able to hear people's thoughts makes daily life even more of a burden. The time has come for her to leave, to live.

She moves into a Paris apartment with Fred, her best friend, and Lolie, the fairy-like girl who fascinates them both. They are all young, beautiful, lovers of music, and life stretches out before them. They share their first apartment, their first concerts - how sweet it is to be together, freer than they've ever been.

But soon things begin to go awry: Alice loses her way, keeps pushing her limits ever further, engages in numerous romantic relationships, and finds out that these can end in hurt. She is so absorbed in her own life that she fails to notice that Lolie has become dangerously withdrawn, and that her friendship with Fred may actually be love...

Maïa Loup studied psychology and educational science and now works teaching disabled children. She lives in the south of France with her two children, two dogs, and five cats. Transparent is her first novel.

- An unusual heroine: clever and favouring reason, with an unbridled sexuality
- A very sensual novel, with a male protagonist who is both realistic and charismatic
- The first instalment of a family saga that plays on the conventions of mystery and piracy fiction

May 1837. Ann Blackson, a rich British heiress, is out of place in high society because of her unconventional behaviour. She nonetheless agreed to a marriage of convenience with a cousin. When he inexplicably flees to the United States shortly before their wedding day, she is determined to find him and hastily boards a departing ship.

But far from a luxury vessel, The Mermaid turns out to be a rough ship captained by a man with murky intentions. Unwillingly caught up in a vile trade she disapproves, the young woman finds help in the gruff second mate. She makes him her lover, thinking he is merely satisfying her physical desires, but he will slowly break down the walls she has so carefully built.

Overwhelmed by what is happening on the ship and what is being awoken within her, the very pragmatic Ann risks seeing her life turned upside down by this dramatic journey.

Will she find redemption while chasing tornadoes?

You & I

Cali Keys

When Alyssa Grant, a student of climatology, loses her brother Ben, she decides to drop everything and head for Tornado Alley. Her goal? Improving the tornado warning system, a project she had begun with her brother and his best friend Wyatt. But she is cruelly lacking in funds.

Then the enigmatic Ethan, a journalism student, offers her a deal: he will finance the expedition if she lets him accompany her. It is love at first sight for her and Ethan. But despite this attraction, Alyssa will not let herself get attached to him, particularly since the young man appears to be harbouring many secrets.

The situation gets more complicated when Wyatt, jealous of Ethan, joins a competing team that has much better resources. Alyssa and Ethan are set for a long and perilous journey...

Ange Guéro

Twenty-nine children live in the Bubble.

Split over five levels – and into three rival groups – with no adults and no contact from the outside world, they have everything they need: food, power, shelter and company. But it's not going to last.

The first sign comes when the food dispensers fail. Mina of the Wolves forges an alliance with Alec, leader of the Crazies gang, in an attempt to restore their food supply, but their mission is not without danger. Fixing the dispensers means crossing the Bear gang's territory, and as tempers fray that's all it takes to spark a lethal war between the children...

Nor is that the end of their troubles. It's not just the food dispensers which are failing, the entire Bubble is falling apart, and with it the children's perceptions of their lives, society and how they came to be alone inside the Bubble. As their gods and their way of life is toppled by some shocking revelations, for the first time the children's eyes turn to the world beyond the Bubble, and to the potential of a new life outside its walls.

Paul Beorn

One day, all the adults on Earth fall one after another into a mysterious coma...

Léo and Marie, two sixteen-year-old high school students, assemble their friends to try and save as many babies and small children as possible and distribute food to the neighbourhood kids.

But in this world abandoned by adults, gangs of thugs round up the existing stocks of food and become increasingly violent. Léo's band must learn how to fight in order to preserve the civilized values of their former lives, refusing the idea that might makes right.

Having finally defeated the 'Spitters', a gang installed in the supermarket, Léo and his friends must confront another enemy: the 'Straight Men', an organised clan which has seized control of a military armoury and holds dozens of child-soldiers as slaves.

In this situation where violence is the ultimate recourse, will the children manage to survive until the grownups wake up?

And what if they never wake up?

- A beautiful, touching and evocative story about the quest for identity
- An absolute joy, for its style and psychological accuracy with which it evokes the dreams and torments of teenagers
- A superb piece of YA magic realism
- A multiple-award winning and exceptionally talented young writer

Arlis is an eleven year old boy. When you're eleven the world is full of strange and wondrous things – things like violence and death, which can emerge from nowhere and change your life forever.

Arlis lives with a travelling fairground. There's Emmett and Lindy, the couple who run the carnival along with Jared, the legless cripple, the gorgeous snake-trainer Katrina, a pair of monkeys and a bear, and they make their home on the open road. Emmett and Lindy are not Arlis' parents. He doesn't know who his real parents are, or where he comes from.

But then the fair arrives in a small town called Bailey Creek, where Arlis meets Faith, the pastor's daughter, and finds both a friend and, perhaps, some answers. Faith is no ordinary girl: she knows the secrets of the corn fields, and with a sacrifice dedicated to the scarecrow who reigns over the area she initiates Arlis into their mysteries as well. And around them, invisible but alarming, ghosts begin to appear.

Nadia Coste

Cassandra is the young daughter of a duke in a faraway kingdom. Since birth she has suffered from a mysterious affliction: whenever she has an emotion that is too intense, fire bursts forth from her skin and scorches everything she touches, including her mother or her own hair!

She's obliged to spend almost every day immersed in water to avoid burning things or hurting people, which is really not much fun for a young girl. So she's delighted when one day her uncle comes up with what looks like a miracle solution for her predicament. But in order to benefit from the cure, she must first travel to the far end of the kingdom.

Cassandra sets off on a strange and perilous voyage, her body in a large tub of water, escorted by two young and rather incompetent knights who will have to protect her from terrifying snake-monkeys and ghostly bandits.

Lise Syven

Faustine’s student life was thrown into turmoil the day her father’s laboratory was blown up. She is immediately given the same close protection that her father’s team gets, and is not indifferent to the charm of Nato, the bodyguard she is allocated.

Faustine is convinced she knows the identity of the man who is pursuing them, and whose goal appears to be the theft and the destruction of the vaccine her father is working on. But he appears to be able to change appearance... Is he even human?

As all hell breaks loose and the murder attempts keep coming, Faustine realises that the stakes are now far higher than the simple theft of a vaccine. Supernatural creatures are engaged in a battle for the future of humanity. One side is trying to save it, the other to destroy it by transforming it into a new and malevolent species. To create this new species they need the vaccine which will enable humans to mutate, and they need Faustine’s body to bring the species into the world.

Chloé Bertrand

Their names are Kiran, Matthey, Tobias and Charly.

They are fourteen, twenty, ten, and sixteen years old.

They live in India, Australia and Utah.

They are children of the same world, a world where, suddenly, everything is going wrong.

Tornadoes, tsunamis and floods: climate disruption is as drastic as the irresponsibility that precipitated it, and the consequences are cataclysmic.

Caught up in the turmoil and left to their own devices, all four of them embark on a long journey, fleeing hostile lands and human folly in search of their families, safer places and, above all, in the hope that a better life is still possible, somewhere.

An uncompromising science fiction novel that brings to life the reality of an international ecological disaster through the eyes of four young people who can count only on themselves to survive.

Born in 1994, Chloé Bertrand was very small when she fell into the world of books. Since then she's never stopped writing. After spending a year in London, Chloé moved to Montreal to study creative writing. ## In the Service of His Majesty Death

(Au Service de Sa Majesté la Mort)

Julien Hervieux

London, 1887. Elizabeth is a young freelance journalist practising her profession despite the shackles of Victorian society. When her mentor is killed before her eyes, Elizabeth herself becomes a bothersome witness and is in turn shot dead.

A new 'existence' then begins for her, for she has been called to join the ranks of the Revenants, a secret and ancient organisation that works on behalf of His Majesty Death himself. As a member of the living dead, her main mission is to find and terminate mortals who have managed to thwart death and gain a little more time on Earth. They can be simple individuals who are unaware of their luck, or influential men who have access to ancestral knowledge that should have remained hidden from them.

But Elizabeth is plagued by doubt. Who is she to kill these people who have done everything to avoid death? And what really lies behind this organisation and its leaders?

Julien Hervieux was born in 1984 and began his career as a history teacher. A well-known blogger on cinema, he lives by his pen and is devoted to writing, his great passion. In the Service of His Majesty Death plunges the reader into the dark universes he prizes, where the action takes place in the shadows, at the limit of our field of vision.

When birthdates determine one's place in society,
radically different fates
may await two sisters

Free as a Dream

(Aussi libres qu'un rêve)

Manon Fargetton

At the end of the 21st century, the Birthdate law tells you which job you'll get. If you're born in January, you can have your dream job: actor, singer, anything is possible. Born in December you're at the bottom of the barrel!

Minöa and Silnëi are twin sisters born several minutes apart the night of the 31st of December –the first at 11:58 p.m. and the second at 12:07 a.m.! The tyranny of Birthdates promises them radically different destinies, but that won't stop them from joining forces to battle injustice and the established order.

They find help from Kléano, rebel singer in a rock group who may be more important to overthrowing the dictatorship than he would ever know... Because some secrets are well-kept, and President Wallow may have bypassed his own law in order to grant his son all the advantages of a noble birth.

Manon Fargetton, equally at ease with fantasy, thrillers, and young-adult fiction (a winner of the Grand Prix du Journal de Mickey 2014), is firmly set on making her own literary path, with all the finesse and imagination that characterize her writing style.

Two teenagers
exchange letters.
One lives in 2014... the other in 1914

14-14

Silène Edgar and Paul Beorn

A century lies between them...

Adrien and Hadrien are two thirteen-year-old boys and they live only a few kilometres from one another in northern France. They both have problems in school, at home, and with girls, like most boys their age. There's only one thing that sets them apart: Adrien lives in the year 2014, and Hadrien in 1914.

But magic intervenes in their destinies and two mailboxes appear before their respective houses, allowing them to exchange letters when they each believe that they are writing to a distant cousin.

Once they understand what is going on, Adrien realises he needs to warn Hadrien that the First World War is about to break out and he must seek shelter at all costs.

Will Hadrien believe him? Will Adrien manage to save this boy who has become his closest friend despite the century that separates them?

- Themes close to teenagers' hearts: school, parents, friendship and love
- A skilfully drawn, fantastic parallel
- Strong suspense right up to the end: what will happen in 1914?

Discover Paris in this frantic high-speed chase as a young girl searches for her heart

Ogre on the Run

(Un Ogre en cavale)

Paul Beorn

Jeanne is hospitalized for appendicitis when an ogre suddenly appears and steals her heart. But dying is out of the question! A musketeer and his talking cat appear at the right moment and lend her a dragon's heart, but it will only work for a day.

In short, the young girl, accompanied by these strange companions, has only several hours to find her vital organ. A frantic high-speed chase through Paris begins, during which Jeanne will have to be courageous and resourceful. She will head through a market with goblins, fly on a hot-air balloon, meet a ghost friend, and attend an epic battle between the gargoyles and the statues of Notre-Dame Cathedral, which have come to life...

And when she finds the person responsible for the appearance of the ogre, she will have to fight with the magic she has discovered in herself, and that could change everything.

Adèle and the Wedding of Queen Margot

(Adèle & les Noces de la reine Margot)

Silène Edgar

Adèle is fed up with her parents, who never understand anything and insist that she keep studying when she could be out having fun with her friends. So, when she finds out she has to read an entire book during her holidays, it’s just too much!

But little by little, Adèle lets herself be carried away by her reading, to the point that she dreams about it at night. And not just any dream: she becomes a character in the novel, and lives at the royal court in the 16th century! She even meets a handsome young man there... But the Saint Bartholomew’s Day Massacre is about to occur and she must warn him of the danger he faces as this tragic event from French history unfolds.

Meanwhile, in Adèle’s waking life, everything is going from bad to worse: poor grades, fights with her parents, misunderstandings with her two best friends...

What Adèle experiences when she closes her eyes is so much more intense than her everyday existence as a 21st century middle school student that it’s becoming harder and harder for her to wake up.

Are her dreams of 1572 worth giving up her life in 2015?

Under the Sun King, one teenage girl's search for identity in the merciless world of nobility

Stolen Letters

(Les Lettres Volées)

Silène Edgar

Françoise is the daughter of the famous Marquise de Sévigné, whose thinking and prose have enchanted the French court. The young woman has been invited to her first dinner with nobles, where she must dazzle everyone with both her vivacity and beauty. Intimidated by the idea of meeting Jean de la Fontaine and Madame de La Fayette, the young girl commits a faux pas. Furious, her mother is prepared to instill in her once again all the rules of morality and good manners. What rotten luck!

But when her mother's cousin suggests that Françoise spend some time at the château of the famous Fouquet, she is given the opportunity to make her start in the world. She will also learn that her perfect mother is hiding a secret that must be kept under wraps at all costs. Navigating her way through malicious gossip, scheming, and compliments with double meanings, the young Mademoiselle de Sévigné will lead an investigation and find the traces of a compromising paper that might prove the existence of a liaison between her mother and Fouquet...

Could he be Françoise's secret father?

Three months in Brittany: the perfect summer holiday, or a secret plan by their parents to keep them safe from the war?

42 Days

(42 Jours)

Silène Edgar

Twelve-year-old Sacha and his little brother Jacob are surprised and delighted to go on holiday earlier than planned, even before the school year is finished. The two young Parisians are even more delighted to be staying in their uncle's boarding house, a manor by the sea in Brittany.

Their stay there, however, does not quite turn out to be the holiday camp they had expected. The boarders are a strange bunch of adults who take themselves for Victor Hugo or King Louis XIV, and at night their uncle appears to be involved in suspect activities with individuals who speak a foreign language.

As the days go by, Sacha realises that France is at war. It is the summer of 1942 and it is because his mother is Jewish that they had to take refuge in Brittany, far from the Nazi roundups of Jews in Paris.

Sacha and Jacob are forced to flee again, this time for the South, as even Brittany is no longer safe as the Germans advance. The children set off on their latest adventure, hoping to soon be reunited with their parents...

Andoryss Mel

To escape from boarding school, on the eve of her thirteenth birthday Camille makes a wish before falling asleep: to never wake up again.

When she re-opens her eyes, she discovers her wish has come true. For here she is, in Evernight, the world of dreams. Wandering in this strange universe, she meets odd characters who lead her to the reverse city, where she must find the librarian, a rat, who will show her how to return to waking reality. But Camille soon discovers she is not welcome in this universe: no humans are tolerated in Evernight!

Only three children have won the right to remain here: Maximilien the Sandman, North the Night Clerk and Mathias the Time Master. This trio helps MacClaw, a tiger, to maintain peace and stability in a world that runs on the energy of dreams, nightmares and the incessant ticking of the clocks measuring the hours while humans sleep.

Can Camille count on them to guide her safely back home? Or must she be wary of the persons who seek to win her trust?

Elie has just lost both her parents in a car accident. Since then, her life has been falling apart. At home, her brother Karl had developed an absurd obsession for plastic ducks, while her Aunt Magalie is busy mass-producing badges. When the teenaged girl catches the two of them whispering together about a mysterious Order and magic spells, she starts to wonder whether she isn’t the only sane one left in her family!

Or else... it might mean that she too has magical powers. Elie then learns all about her family’s history and the secret society of mages, but her initial enthusiasm soon turns to anxiety and nagging questions about the mystery of her parents’ activities and the unresolved circumstances surrounding their death.

What if it wasn’t really the result of an accident?

Elie pursues her investigation to find out the truth with the help of her brother and her aunt, but also her high school friends... plus some magic spells! But girl, watch out, the enemy she faces could very well be deadly!

Borderedge

(Bordemarge)

Emmanuelle Nuncq

In the imaginary kingdom of Borderedge, the rules of fiction reign supreme and swashbuckling characters abound.

Violette, a bored librarian who would love reading about just this kind of extravagant universe, is fed up with the tedium of her own life.

That isn't the case with Roxane, heiress to the throne of Borderedge, now pursued by pirates working for the usurper Duke Silas. Escaping into a magic painting found in a goldsmith's caravan, she emerges in the real world, literally tumbling down on top of Violette. Roxane switches clothing with her, fooling the pirates who abduct the librarian instead and take her back to Borderedge.

But while Roxane frantically seeks to rescue her, Violette grows attached to the pirate holding her captive and starts knocking some realism into him.

All of these fine characters will come together at Borderedge Castle for an epic final battle, where the good guys will triumph over the villains with a display of immense courage, allowing Violette to recover her taste for life, and Roxane, her rightful throne.

Emmanuelle Nuncq was born in 1984 and started reading from the moment she was able to hold a book. Today she has become a novelist, with a work that does honour to the literature she adores.

- A thrilling standalone investigation, full of humour and action
- A story tinged with fantasy but with very contemporary and realistic themes: ecology, GMOs, multinational firms

Nadia Coste

Lea really does not like bugs. For good reason - whenever there's a mosquito around it will always be her who gets stung. This year her holidays at her cousins' house in the country are worse than ever because the wasps and all the other insects are now as big as golf balls!

She and her cousin Max soon discover that there are lots of other strange things going on too: dead fish float down the river, cows keel over unconscious in the meadows, a ferocious rat terrifies the girls... Soon there are so many weird things happening that the whole village is forced to pull together to face up to the danger.

But who or what has turned nature upside down? Lea decides to investigate. She soon hones in on the shenanigans of a big agricultural firm that is blithely polluting the land. She must stop it before it makes nature go completely crazy!

Michaël Mention

1965. Bugged down in Vietnam, the United States is also under fire on home soil in an unprecedented crisis marked by protests, riots, and an explosion of police violence. Twenty million African-Americans are harassed, discriminated against, and neglected on a daily basis.

After the assassination of Malcolm X, the black community is torn between hatred and the non-violent protest preached by Martin Luther King. The Black Panther Party suddenly appears on the scene. It defies racist America, arms thousands of its militants, and provides support for the people of the ghettos. A revolution is in the making.

The government declares war on the Black Panthers, a ruthless war that will utterly change the lives of Charlene, a young militant, Neil, a police officer, and Tyrone, an FBI infiltrator.

None of them, nor indeed the entire country, will be spared the ravages of the sixties.

(Les Loups-Garous de Thiercelieux)

Silène Edgar & Paul Beorn

In the village of Millers Hollow, the summer of 1846 is coming to an end and all seems well. But one night, Lune and her friends hear the mysterious call of the Red Moon and they follow a black wolf to an abandoned trunk, where they find wolf masks and a strange poem that speaks of revenge.

Something awakens in them and the teenagers swear they will fight injustice by punishing the villagers who wronged them. Millers Hollow is thrown into a state of panic.

At night, Lune puts on her disguise and gives free rein to her wild nature, while in daytime her best friend Lapsa investigates these incidents which strangely remind her of the mystery surrounding her father's death years before...

This murder mystery game was a precursor in 2001 when it was first released. With millions of players and aficionados around the world, it has become an emblematic game of the XXIst century.

Silène Edgar and Paul Beorn are the acclaimed authors of the middle-grade novel 14-14 (over 80,000 copies in France and sold in 12 countries), and they have both written several other successful and awarded YA and Fantasy novels.

- A fun and educational guide aimed at young readers (8+)
- A richly illustrated book, with more than 150 photos and dozens of original illustrations
- The official tie-in book of the major new family TV programme about to be broadcast the world over

The essential guide for every budding adventurer with a passion for the wild

The Rangers' Code

(Le Code des Rangers)

Safari Go!

A book that entertains and educates both young and old about the fragile ecological balance of Africa's flora and fauna. It offers advice on how to preserve nature reserves and provides a guide on how to survive in the savannah. All this plus a wealth of information on wild animals.

Monkeys, birds, large mammals or tiny insects – you will soon know all their secrets! Their social life, eating habits, how they reproduce, hunting grounds, predators, tracks and camouflage – all will be revealed. The reader will also be treated to a host of astonishing but true anecdotes.

Young adventurers will get lots of useful advice laced with plenty of humour: how to make a paw print mould, how to pack your backpack, how to track an animal, how to find your way without a compass, how to build a hut, how to escape from a lion, a hippo or a crocodile...

Youngsters will also find out all about topical issues such as poaching and threatened, vulnerable, and critically endangered species.

Minuscule

Julien Dupuy

Go behind the scenes of the movie and relive the great adventure via the testimonies of the teams that created the film and through oodles of unpublished archives. Throughout the 224 pages of the book, the secrets of how this universe was built are revealed, with more than 600 exclusive visuals (all rights included!) to illustrate each step of the production.

- Two official books
written with the collaboration of the film-making team:
  - A complete making-of for movie and animation lovers
  - A documentary aimed at children telling the
Minuscule story
- Hundreds of unpublished photos,
exclusive designs and storyboards

A behind-the-scenes voyage shows the magic of cinema and explains the making of the film to children. Young readers discover the Minuscule journey on a world map, and how a film is made step by step, while the movie's directors will answer their questions. Ninety-six richly illustrated, funny and educational pages.

The Minuscule saga began in 2006 with a television series that became cult, and in 2019 gets its second cinematic outing with Minuscule: Mandibles From Far Away. The first film in 2014, Minuscule: Valley of the Lost Ants, was seen by millions and won the Best Animated Film César award.

Julien Dupuy is a film director and journalist. He has written for various film magazines and for the newspaper Le Monde, and has produced several television documentaries. He is a leading expert on genre, animation and visual effects, and has endless passion for monsters of the big screen and their creators.
